Animal Fun Nov 13 2019 Slide the cards. Match the clues. and just see what crazy creatures you can create! Have you ever met a kangarelephant? No? Well, now you might because there's a jumble in the jungle--and it's all caused by a great new animal game. The fun begins when kids move an image from the back of the stack across to the other side, revealing a picture clue. One by one, shift the cards until a matching clue comes up. Then turn the whole thing over: a complete animal appears! If the clues have been coordinated correctly, you'll get a real creature--but make a mistake and it's a nonsense beast, like a gorillda (gorilla + panda). Play again and again, until all the attached cards on one side have met their match. Then glide them the other way for a whole new set of possibilities. It's a world of wackiness.and a really good time.

Models of Reference Feb 15 2020 To communicate, speakers need to make it clear what they are talking about. Referring expressions play a crucial part in achieving this, by anchoring utterances to things. Examples of referring expressions include noun phrases such as "this phenomenon", "it" and "the phenomenon to which this Topic is devoted". Reference is studied throughout the Cognitive Sciences (from philosophy and logic to neuro-psychology, computer science and linguistics), because it is thought to lie at the core of all of communication. Recent years have seen a new wave of work on models of referring, as witnessed by a number of recent research projects, books, and journal Special Issues. The Research Topic "Models of Reference" in Frontiers in Psychology is a new milestone, focusing on contributions from Psycholinguistics and Computational Linguistics. The articles in it are concerned with such issues as audience design, overspecification, visual perception, and variation between speakers.
